Handwritten text in Telugu script on a palm leaf manuscript. The text is written in a cursive style and is partially obscured by a large, dark, irregular stain or hole in the center. The leaf is aged and shows signs of wear, including small holes and discoloration. The text is arranged in a single line across the length of the leaf.

Handwritten text in Telugu script on a palm leaf manuscript. The text is arranged in approximately 10 horizontal lines across the length of the leaf. The script is a traditional form of Telugu, likely from the 18th or 19th century. The leaf shows signs of age, including discoloration, wear, and a small circular hole near the center. The text is written in a dark ink, possibly iron or copper, which is characteristic of traditional palm leaf manuscripts. The lines of text are closely spaced, and the overall appearance is that of a well-preserved but aged historical document.

This image shows a single, long, narrow palm-leaf manuscript strip. The leaf is made of a light brown, fibrous material and is heavily damaged, with numerous holes and tears throughout. The text is written in a dark, possibly ink or ochre, in a South Indian script, likely Grantha or Tamil. The script is highly stylized and compact, with many characters appearing to be variations of a few basic forms. The text is arranged in a single line across the length of the leaf, with some characters appearing to be written in a different script or dialect than the main body of text. The leaf is set against a plain, light-colored background.
